

Women in Construction Week

March 6-12, 2022

HOW YOU CAN CELEBRATE WIC WEEK

Women in Construction Week is celebrated all over the country and internationally. Whether you want to join in on a local chapter activity or celebrate with your own company, here are some ways you can participate.

Plan a WIC Week event

NAWIC chapters are not the only ones who can plan WIC Week events. You can hold a celebration lunch, a job site tour, or volunteer to talk to a local high school about how the construction industry needs women to fill the skilled trades gap. Get creative and plan a fun and informative event of your own!

Join a local NAWIC chapter for one of their events

NAWIC has over 120 chapters across the country. Chances are there is a chapter near you with plans to celebrate WIC Week. Head over to the WIC Week page on nawic.org to find a calendar of events across the U.S. and online.

Recognize the women at your company

Take a few minutes to recognize the hardships and victories of the women working at your company. Whether its through an email, a social media post, or just visiting them at their desk, take a moment to say you are proud of them for the hard work they put into the industry every day,

Learn about the importance of women joining the construction industry

From closing the skilled trades gap to bringing in new perspectives, there are a million positives to women joining the construction industry. Though women make up only 10% of the industry, they bring valuable skills and experiences that every company needs. Take a few minutes to learn about the pros of women joining the industry and how you can encourage other women to join and support those who are already in it.

Join NAWIC with a corporate membership

Companies can join NAWIC through corporate memberships, which gives a woman representative from their company all the benefits of a NAWIC membership, including professional and personal development, a support system, and more. Find out more about membership options at nawic.org.
